Curse Of The Nandi (Society For Paranormals Book 5)

Synopsis

Marital bliss was never this complicated! Mrs. Beatrice Knight is preparing to start a life of marital bliss, or at least marital satisfaction, with her new husband who fortunately is very much alive and can't float through walls. While she is no expert on honeymoons, she's certain that they shouldn't involve brainless heads, bloodsucking fireflies and Bubonic Plague. These however are mere inconveniences, for there's another threat of greater significance: the Nandi are rising up against their colonial masters and are determined to rid the land of all things British. The intrepid Mrs. Knight faces all this with her usual aplomb, her hefty walking stick and, of course, a pot of tea. But will her marriage survive? Curse of the Nandi is the fifth case in the Society for Paranormals, where African myth meets Victorian manners. If you adore Pride & Prejudice, appreciate British humor, enjoy paranormal mysteries, or would love to experience adventure in colonial Africa, buy Curse of the Nandi to resume your supernatural safari! Customer Reviews

I am a big fan of Mrs. Beatrice Knight - er - sorry, of Mrs. Beatrice Timmons, the plucky former investigator for the Society for Paranormal and Curious Animals who leads what can only be described as an interesting life in the wilds of East Africa during the 1890s. As a mostly proper Victorian widow who has only recently remarried (her new husband is a roguish fellow with his own paranormal attributes), Bea is the daughter of a witch, the sister of a werewolf, the cousin-in-law of a man who can turn into a giant bat, the owner of a horse that can fly (when she's not dozing sleepily in a barn), and is apparently eternally bound - despite his death - to her first husband, the ghostly Gideon Knight who has the unfortunate habit of walking through walls when he wants to chat with her. In addition, she lost a hand in a confrontation with a giant, shape-shifting praying mantis (who can also appear as a stunningly beautiful woman), and now sports a mechanical one. She was once bitten by a werewolf (she has a mangled ear to bear witness to that fact), and can summon a wolf spirit when she needs to (and, sometimes, even when she doesn't want to.) She carries a gadget-laden walking stick that she occasionally uses to thump both normal and paranormal people and creatures; is an expert with a bow and arrow, and has both a sharp tongue and a sharp wit.
